Travel Planning

Iberian Traveler (beriantraveler.com) – American based company offering guided and self-guided small group tours in Spain, Portugal and southwest France. Specializing in custom wine and gastronomy packages in the Rioja, Navarra and the Basque Country, and the Fiesta de San Fermín and the encierro, the running of the bulls, in Pamplona.

Totally Spain (totallyspain.com) - You can contact Irishman Ken Baldwin and Spaniard Belén Encina regarding hotel reservations and car hire throughout the country. They offer unbeatable personalized service. Highly recommended for easy travel planning throughout Spain.

Arriving in Sevilla

Santa Justa Station - The AVE departs Madrid's Puerta de Atocha Renfe station several times each day, arriving at Seville's modern Santa Justa station 2-1/2 hours later. From there you can take a taxi to your hotel (€6 - €7). The AVE trains have three classes of service: Tourist (turista), Business (preferente) and Club, with service similar to the Club Car service on US Eastern Seaboard Metroliners, offering passengers ala carte meals and unlimited bar service. There is no need to purchase a business class "preferente" ticket on this short run as the turista class seats are fine. An exception would be during Holy Week or Feria de Abril when tourist class often sells out days and even weeks in advance with the only remaining seats being in business ("Preferente") class, costing €32 more. The premium class cars have a 2-1 seating configuration, a meal is served (breakfast –lunch – snack - dinner) and drinks are free. Preferente class passengers have access to the first-class lounges at each station, which offer free newspapers, soft drinks, juices, water, packaged snacks, Internet access and free parking. Are these perks worth €32 pp for such a short ride? For me they are not, although I do travel in "Preferente" on longer runs such as from Madrid to Valencia or Barcelona. Check the current schedule and prices at: renfe.es.

Aeropuerto de San Pablo - Seville's airport is situated just 12 kms outside of the city. Currently there are international flights arriving from Amsterdam, Brussels, Düsseldorf, Florence, Frankfurt, Lisbon, London's Stansted and Gatwick, Liverpool, Milan and Paris' CDG and Orly. All of Spain's low cost carriers fly from Barcelona to Sevilla; Clickair, Vueling, Air Europe and Spanair, competing with Iberia and keeping fares low. Iberia is the only player flying from Madrid to Sevilla because the AVE bullet train makes the trip convenient, swift and easy.

Transportation from the airport to the city - The shuttle bus leaves from in front of the arrivals terminal, "Especial Aeropuerto (EA)", from 7:00 in the morning until 10:00 at night, dropping passengers off at Puerta de Jerez, or in the area near Santa Justa station. From there one can taxi to hotel, but taxis directly from the airport to hotel are quickest and easiest. The taxi fare Monday - Friday is a fixed rate of €18,58, while on Saturday, Sunday and holidays the rate is fixed at €20,72.

Rental Cars - You will find having a car during your stay in Seville to be an albatross, not at all recommended and totally unnecessary. If you plan to continue by car to other areas after your Seville stay, you can pick up the car upon departing the city at either Santa Justa train station or at the airport. If you arrive in the city by car, you'll find the easiest drop-off is at the airport. Traffic from the highway into Santa Justa train station can be heavy and the area around the station congested.

I generally arrange all of my Spanish car rentals from the USA through the consolidator - wholesaler Auto Europe (autoeurope.com), or its sister company Kemwel (kemwel.com). Cars are usually subcontracted through Europcar, their preferred supplier, or can be arranged through Avis upon request. Payment is required at the time of the booking, but is fully refundable should you change your mind.

Guided and Self-guided Tours

Seville Card - This city's monument / transportation pass is available for 1, 2 or 3 days, starting at €26.60 for the one-day pass. Passes offer free admission to 13 museums and palaces, unlimited trips on the hop on/hop off tour buses, unlimited public bus rides, a Guadalquivir River cruise, a guided tour of the Real Alcázar and Santa Cruz district, an audio guide to downtown and restaurant and flamenco club discounts. Also available, a public transportation pass for €3.11/day. But most visitors will find that public transportation within the city is not necessary as one can easily walk to the major sights. The passes may or may not offer you a real savings, but you can view all of these "money saving" (???) options at: sevillacard.es.

Tourist Office - The main tourist office is located on Avenida de la Constitución, 21, behind the cathedral.

Guided Tours

Paseando por Sevilla - offers small group tours of the city that have been very well reviewed. You can check their offerings at: paseandoporsevilla.com/index2.html.

There are also private guides available to show you around including the following favorites, both of whom lead walking tours of the city.

- Concepción Delgado (sevi-ruta@sevi-ruta.com)
- Antonio Doblas (adoblasg@terra.es)

Sightseeing in Sevilla

Cathedral - The cathedral is considered to be the third largest Cathedral in the world after St. Paul's in London and St. Peter's in Rome, but it does have the world's largest altarpiece and is supposedly the final resting place of Christopher Columbus. Santo Domingo in the Dominican Republic disputes this claim. The remains have recently been removed for DNA testing to finally put a end to these disputes once and for all. The Guinness Book of World Records claims that Sevilla's cathedral also has the world's largest interior space. There is a prominent Moorish minaret, or watchtower rising above the plaza. In the 12th century it served as the minaret for the Grand Mosque, La Giralda. Walk up the 37 ramps leading to the top for the spectacular views of the city. The cathedral was built with ramps instead of steps as the Moors used to charge up the ramps on horseback to call the faithful to prayer. The cathedral gift shop has nice selection of books and souvenirs. Opening hours for cultural visits outside of the regular mass hours are: September - June, Monday - Friday from 11:00 to 5:00 and 2:30 to 6:00 on Sunday. In July and August, Monday - Friday from 9:30 to 3:30 and 2:30 to 6:00 on Sundays (catedralsevilla.org).

Reales Alcázares - Built by Peter the Cruel in 14th century, this is the official residence for the King and Queen when they come to town. It boasts splendid tile work and a maze-like construction in which you'll find yourself constantly getting lost, saying, "have I been in this room before?" Its beautiful, fragrant gardens, worth at least an hour of your time in and of themselves, are my favorites in Andalucía. If you see it before you visit the Alhambra, the faded colors of the tile work in Granada may actually be a bit of a letdown.

Barrio de Santa Cruz - The highly atmospheric, romantic former Jewish quarter, is in the area east of the cathedral and the Reales Alcázares. It's a delightful, typically Moorish labyrinth of very narrow, winding cobblestone streets, many far too narrow for cars to pass through. Here you'll see whitewashed houses with balconies festooned with geraniums and lovely patios with gurgling fountains surrounded by orange trees, wonderful for aimlessly strolling about. At night you'll come across young people playing guitar in the plazas and impromptu dancing of Sevillanas in the Plaza de los Venerables. You'll find the Hostería del Laurel of the Don Juan legend in the Plaza de Doña Elvira. Restaurante La Albahaca, Los Gallos tablao, El Tamboril bar are located in the Plaza de Santa Cruz. The Murillo gardens are particularly special. Watch your purses/wallets when walking through this area at night.

Horse drawn carriage ride - Catch the carriage in front of the Cathedral. It will take you past the university building, which was the Real Fábrica de Tabacos, the Tobacco factory of the classic Spanish opera Carmen. After passing the factory, you'll pass through María Luisa Park and onto its beautifully tiled Plaza de España, one of Spain's top five public city parks and a wonderful oasis in this city. The route then takes you down the Guadalquivir River past the Torre de Oro and the beautiful La Maestranza Plaza de Toros, the bullring. It's a great, relaxing way to get an overview of the city and very romantic at night. Well worth the cost. The going rate for a 40-minute tour is around €30. If you miss out on this, you can always try a buggy ride in Córdoba.

Casa de Pilatos - This is an early 16th-century mansion and a house of the superlatives; best tiles, best bougainvillea, best patio, best arches, best fountains, best idea of what a staggeringly opulent city Seville must have been when it was at its peak. This dazzling mix of Moorish and Renaissance styles hidden behind a discreet facade is now a private museum with a stunning collection of Moorish tiles (azulejos). Maybe the price tag and the hard-to-locate location puts off most of the tour groups because at times you can almost convince yourself it's all yours. The walls are completely “papered” in tiles of several different designs. Makes you dizzy just contemplating them. It also has pretty gardens with fountains for a rest. Don't miss this “out of the way” gem!

Palacio de la Condesa de Lebrija - Calle Cuna, 8, behind the pedestrian street Calle Sierpes, is another sumptuous 16th century palace. The central patio is paved with Roman mosaics and lovely 17th century ceramic work on the staircase. Open Mondays and Fridays from 10:30 to 1:00 and 5:00 to 7:00, Saturdays from 10:00 to 1:00 only.

Museo de Bellas Artes - Seville's Museum of Fine Arts has a reputation second only to the Prado for its fine collection of 17th century Spanish Baroque masters. The museum, housed in a 16th century monastery whose main chapel is the piece de resistance, is filled with paintings by Sevilla's Esteban Murillo. Other Spanish Baroque masterpieces by Zurbarán, a beautiful set of female saints, Pacheco, Velázquez, plus Italian Caravaggio, have to work hard to compete with this magnificent setting. The former convent is so beautiful you'd take vows just to live there. The shining darkness of Spanish Catholicism is the main impression you get from these devout canvases, culminating in the great glory of room 5 where the lavishly decorated dome seems to lead to the heavens. This is a totally unsung gem.

Hospital de la Caridad - Calle Temprado, 3, is a 17th century Baroque hospital and church containing haunting paintings by two of Sevilla's native sons, Esteban Murillo and Valdes Leal. They include the latter's quite macabre picture of an archbishop devoured by maggots, above exit door of the chapel. The convent's founder, Don Miguel de Mañara, is buried beneath the hospital's chapel. Legend says that he was the model for the original Don Juan character in Tirso de Molina's play, El Burlador de Sevilla. Open Monday – Saturday, 9:30 to 1:00 and 3:30 to 6:30, Sundays from 9:00 to 1:00.

Basílica de la Macarena - In La Macarena quarter, the old working-class neighborhood of Sevilla, is also home to the most revered idol in this city of shrines, the tomb the most idolized by matadors. Virgen de La Esperanza Macarena is the virtual goddess of Sevilla; a 17th century statue of the Virgin Mary kneeling in prayer, is paraded on a solid silver platform with incredible ceremony during Holy Week every year. She lives with her carriage in the modern Macarena Basilica, near the old city wall, and is a fabulous sight to behold. And all the more so because she's adorned in priceless diamonds donated by Joselito, a famed local matador. Clearly his devotion didn't work, as he died in the ring in 1920. His heroically over-the-top tomb, always adorned in fresh flowers, is in the nearby cemetery of San Fernando.

Archivo General de Indias - Situated on the west side of the Plaza de Triunfo, houses the largest documentation of Spain's discoveries of the New World. Primarily for scholarly research, the archives have a small revolving exhibit open to the public and which may include documents written by Columbus, Cortés or Pizarro. Open Monday to Friday from 10:00 to 1:00. Admission is fee.

Parque de María Luisa - Can easily be seen by carriage ride, as the 2 minor museums surrounding the extravagantly tiled Plaza de las Américas, built for the 1929 Ibero-American Exposition, are in the process of renovation and may be closed to the public. This is a popular spot on Sundays for families who stroll the grounds, or sit at one of the many outdoor cafes at the entrance to the park. DO NOT wander through this park late at night.

A boat trip down the river - Only recommended simply to refresh you on a blusteringly hot summer day-put your feet up after a taxing round of sightseeing and take one of the half hour trips down the Guadalquivir River. This can be a pleasant way to spend your siesta time between lunch and more sightseeing/shopping during the fiery hot summer season. Doesn't go too far and doesn't pass many historically beautiful or significant sites but a nice way to cool off during siesta. Cruceros Panorámicos offers this from the Torre de Oro daily.

Relaxing in a Hamaam (day spa)

Aires de Sevilla – This urban spa has been created from the remains of 17th century Arab baths (Hamman) and can be found tucked away down a narrow street in the Santa Cruz quarter. It offers several different packages including a 90-minute bath followed by aromatherapy or a massage. The baths are mixed and swimming suits are required, but if you don't have one, they will lend one to you. Open year around from 10:00 am to 2:00 am daily. You should book a week ahead for a weekend treatment, or at least 24 hours in advance for a mid-week appointment. The attached teashop serves breakfast, teas and Moorish pastries. You can check prices and make a reservation online at: airedesevilla.com.

The Sherry Triangle

Jerez

Head to Jerez the capital of the “Sherry Triangle” to take a tour of the sherry bodegas, or to watch an equestrian ballet, the “Dancing Horses of Andalusia”.

Sherry Bodega Tours - The Domecq and González Byass bodegas (the "biggies") are on the far southwest side of town, side-by-side, and a bit hard to reach because the signage in Jerez is poor. If you choose to visit either one, follow the signs on the ring road west, leading you to the N-480 and Sanlúcar de Barrameda, or the N-IV towards Cádiz to reach that side of town. You'll need to park on the street wherever you can find a spot. Domecq has no official parking lot for their tours as a way of not encouraging mass visits. Please be aware of the "gypsy parking attendants" hovering around, looking semi-official, will offer to help you park, then "guard" your car during your stay, expecting a tip, of course. We had experienced these often in Sevilla so just ignored them. We weren't sure whether we had parked illegally or not due to the lack of signage, and left our luggage in the trunk, which couldn't be avoided, but it was tucked away on a side street with no traffic.

Although the Domecq bodega is the oldest and considered by some to be the most prestigious, with casks autographed by Franco, royalty, celebrities (one of the bodegas has Mezquita inspired architecture), they weren't particularly welcoming at first. We had the feeling that their public relations department offers tours reluctantly since they interfere with their day, make noise, disturb the sherry at rest, and generally just get in the way of their ultra serious sherry production.

Your hotel in Sevilla can arrange Bodegas bus-tours. VisiTours has small busses that hold 20-25 people. Combine the horse ballet / bodega tours of Marqués del Tesoro, like a Napa Valley tour, then a drive to Puerto de Santa María in time for lunch, take the boat to Cadiz, where you'll meet the bus for your return trip to Sevilla. It makes a stop at the beach in Puerto where you can take a small tour of city.

If you want to combine the Dancing Horses of Jerez ballet and a bodega tour on your own, after the horse ballet ends at 1:30, you can walk around the long, wedge shaped block to catch the 2:15 English (or Spanish) tour at the Sandeman bodegas, just behind the Royal Equestrian School. While Sandeman is famed primarily for its ports, the 1-hour long tour is quite handy, sleek and well done by young ladies in “Zorro-type” black caped costumes and black Cordoban hats. The tour ends in the “Sacristía” with a very ample tasting of three of its sherry varieties; a fino, a medium and a Pedro Ximénez sweet sherry served with chips and olives. The exit takes you very through the rather nice gift shop. In you're in need of sustenance by then, walk across the street to the dining room of the new 4-star Gran Hotel Palmera Plaza. Lunch is served in the summer in Jerez until 4:00.

Bodega Domecq - We toured the Domecq bodega in Jerez in June, driving there from our lodging outside of Arcos on our way up to Seville. The desk staff made our reservations, you must reserve ahead for Domecq, for the 10:00 tour. Tours are only given hourly in the mornings. There were only 5 people in our group and because our friend was the only non-Spanish-speaking member of the group, the tour guide informed us that she would give our tour in Spanish only. After a bit of coaxing, she relented and took the 3 of us off on our own for a private tour in English and her English was impeccable. She turned out to be charming after all. At the end she left us alone in the large tasting room with five full bottles of sherry, from dry fino to sweet rich Pedro Ximénez, for us to taste to our heart's content. We could have stayed around for hours, but the sherry is quite potent before lunch. Domecq has visits from Monday to Friday from 10:00 to 2:00. The afternoon visit includes a aperitif. They also offer pre-arranged visits in the afternoons and on weekends by appointment only. Book in advance at: alvarodomecq.es/

González Byass - makers of Tío Pepe, is still a family run business. Like Domecq, the bodega is a cathedral-like warehouse with cavernous ceilings and high windows that channel the breezes from Africa, which allows the sherry to mature. Wrought-iron lanterns illuminate the rows and rows of dusty barrels, many autographed by royalty and celebrities who have visited over the years. The bodega has (or had) tours at 11:30, 12:30, 1:30, 4:30, 5:30 and 6:30 weekdays and Sunday mornings. One mid-day tour includes tapas and costs €7.

You can e-mail to reserve a tour at: gonzalezbyass.com/ing/bodeg\_tot.htm.

González Byass is a bit more "tour friendly", accepting large groups, versus Domecq, which is now owned by Seagram and which is the least touristy and most "exclusive".

Sandeman Bodegas - C/Pizarro, 10. Visits available during the week, Monday – Friday, Saturday by appointment only. Closed on Sunday. Special 1790 Tour: €16,00/person, reservations required. See: sandeman.com/ing/general.html to check the complete schedule. Tel: 956 312 995.

Wisdom and Warter - near Sandeman at C/Pizarro, 7, has tours Monday to Wednesday and Fridays at 1:15 and Thursdays at 11:00 and 2:00 for a cost of €2 (wisdomwarter.es). Tel: 956 184 306 .

Williams and Humbert – Carretera N-IV, Km 641, has one of Europe's largest wine cellars. Makers of Duque de Alba Brandy, one of Spain's best brandies. They offer a free Equestrian Show with the tour on Wednesday and Friday at 10:00 or 12:00. Reservations required. See: williams-humbert.com/ for complete information. Tel: 956 353 406 .

Tapas in Jerez

Bar Juanito - For tapas in Jerez, go to the legendary Bar Juanito, featured in Saveur magazine. It's tiny and tucked away on the minuscule Calle Pescadería Vieja off Plaza Arenal, now run by Juanito's son Faustino. The décor consists of sherry barrels, plants, knick-knacks and hams hanging from ceiling hooks. They offer 60 varieties of tapas, the best being the artichokes in a sauce of sherry, olive oil, scallions, garlic, parsley and breadcrumbs. Also try the steak braised in oloroso. Has won the National Gastronomy Prize of Spain.

Tendido 6 - For classic, sit-down dining in Jerez, go to where the matadors go, Calle Circo, 10, located in front of the bullring. Specialty is oxtail stew. www.tendido6.com
Closed Sundays

La Mesa Redona - The very best table in town can be found at Manuel de la Quintana, 3 (closed Sundays). It's within easy walking distance of the Real Escuela del Arte Ecuestre.

Lodging in Jerez

If you'd like to add a night or two to your stay, particularly during Holy Week, or the Feria del Caballo, the Horse Fair in May, or the Festival de la Vendimia, the Wine Festival in late September, you can consider the following:

5-star Gran Hotel Palmera Plaza - new in '03, it's directly across from the Sandeman sherry bodegas, near the Royal Equestrian School (laspalmerasjerez.com/). Jerez's nicest in-town lodging.

5-star Villa de Jerez - is in an elegant residential area of the city (villajerez.com/), and a member of Small Leading Hotels of the World (slh.com). Pretty pool.

4-star Hotel Bellas Artes – Brand new (hotelbellasartes.com) and a member of Rusticae, a collection of elegant, small and charming inns throughout Spain. It has 21 beautifully furnished rooms with views of the cathedral, a library, piano bar, terraces and Jacuzzi. Breakfast included in the tariff. Can be booked at Inns of Spain (innsofspain.com) and Rusticae (rusticae.com).

3-star Tierras de Jerez - is owned by the Casas y Palacios group, which also owns the Casas de la Judería and Casas de los Mercaderes in Sevilla. (intergroupoteles.com/html/index.html).

Sanlúcar de Barrameda (on an afternoon)

Another of the "sherry triangle" towns

Casa Balbino - Sipping cold Manzanilla sherry from Sanlúcar under a blazing summer at mid-day, dining on the world's best "langostinos" (prawns) is what everyone in Seville yearns for. You can either float down the river on a cruise from Seville's Torre de Oro boat dock to this kind of shabbily, languidly charismatic estuary town, or drive in from Jerez. At the top of the hill in Sanlúcar, it's all fragrant white bodegas and fading aristocracy. There's a famous tapas bar, Casa Balbino, in the Plaza del Cabildo main square, legendary for its 50 varieties of tapas like shrimp tortilla (tortilla de camarones). Rated as one of top tapas bars in all of Andalucía.

Bajo de Guia - Down by the sea on the promenade, called the Bajo de Guia (literally bottom of the map), it's a fishing village turned cooking village. Take tapas by the beach as the sunsets fire red and kids play at the water's edge. You'll be facing the most important and largest wildlife reserve in Europe, the Coto de Doñana. You can take a 4-hour boat trip on the Real Fernando steamer over to Doñana from here. Inquire at the Fábrica de Hielos office.

Casa Bigote - If the weather is chilly, for dining move indoor to Casa Bigote (book beforehand) for one of the best meals in Andalucía. Inside is a virtual museum-be sure to have a look at least.

Casa Juan and Mirador de Doñana - But if it's nice weather, have an alfresco lunch at one of the restaurants on the riverfront promenade overlooking the beach with outdoor terrace, such as Casa Juan or the Mirador de Doñana. The Prime Minister, Aznar, took Tony Blair to dine at the latter.

Manzanilla (Sanlúcar's version of sherry) Bodega Tours

Bodegas Barbadillo - Calle Sevilla, 25, near the castle, are the major producer, producing 70% of Manzanilla. They give tours Monday - Saturday at noon and 1:00 for €3. Sunday reserved for groups only. Tel: 956 385 500 Fax: 956 385 501

Email for reservations at reserves@barbadillo.com.

Bodegas Pedro Romero – Founded in 1860 by Vicente Romero Carranza, this family owned bodega offers tours from Tuesday - Saturday in English and Spanish at noon (pedroromero.es) for €6. No prior reservation required. Tour begins in a salon with table surrounded by family pictures. There a Pedro Ximénez is poured while the guide explains the history of the bodega. Then commences a 90-minute tour of the facilities. At the end, the guide pours fresh Manzanilla from the barrel to taste. Tel: 956 36 0 736.

El Puerto de Santa María

The 3rd sherry triangle city

Romerijo - Easy drive from Seville; can combine Sanlúcar, Jerez and El Puerto on a long, full day trip. Head straight down to the Ribera del Marisco facing the water where you'll find the legendary Romerijo, filled at all times, one of the most popular spots in all of El Puerto (romerijo.com). Has boiling cauldrons filled with shellfish, freidurias, for preparing fresh “pescaíto frito” (deep fried fish, the local obsession). Try either a sampling of their shellfish (a mariscada) or a platter of fried fish (fritura de e’pescado) and a pitcher of beer. Open from noon to midnight.

Faro del Puerto - For more formal dining at one of the very best restaurants in the entire coast, head out on the highway to El Faro del Puerto (elfarodelpuerto.com), written up in Gourmet, Saveur, etc. Housed in a chalet surrounded by gardens and offering magnificent seafood, a well-chosen wine list and outdoors dining in season. Closed Sunday nights, except during August.

El Puerto de Santa María Bodega Tours

Bodegas Osborne - To sample El Puerto’s sherry production, reserve spots on the guided tours given at Bodegas Osborne’s two cellars, the Bodega de Mora in town (produces sherry), open Monday - Friday from 10:00 - 1:30. Tour in English is at 10:30, Spanish at 11:00 and noon. Tour hours are the same at its Bodega el Tiro (brandy), on the N-IV highway. Email them to reserve the 90-minute guided tour at visitas.bodegas@osborne.es or call 956 869 100.

Bodegas Terry – Is open Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, 9:00 to 1:00. Tours cost €4,50 and includes a visit to the stables of beautiful Carthusian Hispano-Arab horses. Tel: 956 543 690. Email: bodegas@terry.es

Half-day trip to Córdoba via the high-speed AVE train Except on Mondays

Depart from Santa Justa rail station on the 9:00 am AVE, which arrives in Córdoba at 9:40 (buy a “turista” class ticket), take a taxi (around 5 euros) to the plaza in front of the mosque, La Mezquita, now the official Córdoba cathedral, and first acquaint yourself with the layout of the city and get a good map at the handy regional tourist office on the square.

The Mezquita opens for visits at 10:00 to 7:30 Monday to Saturday and Sundays from 2:00 until 7:30 pm. Try to enter at 10:00, as by 11:00 the hordes of tour bus groups will have arrived, making leisurely, contemplative viewing of the treasures there within virtually impossible. After touring the mosque, head to the gardens of the adjacent Alcázar de los Reyes Cristianos, open Monday to Saturday from 10:00 – 2:00 and from 4:30 – 6:00, Sundays from 9:30 – 3:00.

If you're a bullfight aficionado, and read Spanish, then stroll over to the Museo Taurino on Plaza Maimónides in the heart of the Judería, the ancient Jewish quarter, across from the NH Amistad hotel (closed Mondays). It's a huge, rambling, musty 2-floor structure with rooms filled with memorabilia and 19th century bullfight posters, some rooms having been made shrines to two famed Cordoban born bullfighters, Manolete and El Cordobé, but no explanations in English. On Calle Judíos, 20, visit the tiny 14th century (pre-Inquisition) synagogue (also closed on Mondays), one of the two oldest in Spain, the other being Toledo's Sinagoga del Tránsito, now closed for renovation. Note the upstairs women's gallery and the intricate Hebrew stuccowork. While in the Judería, your senses will be assaulted by the crass, tacky souvenir shop souk-like atmosphere that has been built up around the mosque. Lose yourself in the back alleys and side streets of this labyrinth to get a better flavor of the quarter and to peek through the wrought iron gates into the beautifully decorated interior patios of the homes.

Visit the Casa Andalusi, a typical Cordoban home with a number of patios near the synagogue on Judíos, 12, or take a carriage ride from the Plaza del Triunfo to escape the tourist throngs and tackiness of the souvenir medina surrounding the mosque. If you are an art buff, make a short visit to the Museo de Bellas Artes on the Plaza del Potro, which houses works by Ribera, Zuloaga, Zurburán and Goya (closed Monday).

Dining in Córdoba

Restaurante Caballo Rojo - Cardenal Herrero, 28, (elcaballorojo.com) has a lovely shaded terrace upstairs, an oasis from the tourist hordes, offering really fine and creative regional fare based on ancient Mozarabic and Sephardic dishes. Very attentive service, and known as one of the finest dining spots in Andalucía, Córdoba being the culinary capital of the region. Try the thick gazpacho, salmorejo, and the artichokes in Montilla wine.

Taberna Casa Pepe de la Judería - If you're not in the mood for a full meal but just need tapas instead, head straight to Calle Romero, 1, to where you can sit downstairs in the shaded patio and order from their extensive tapas/raciones menu. Try the truly delicious olive oil ice cream. No, really!

After a late lunch in either spot, you'll be ready to take the 40-minute AVE ride back to Sevilla. Afternoon trains depart the station at 3:44, 4:44 and 5:44.

Lodging in Córdoba

If you do decide to spend the night, the finest lodging is tucked away on the Plaza de Maimónides, the 4-star NH Amistad (nh-hotels.com) but if in the height of the scorching summer heat, you'll welcome a hotel pool, so I'd chose the more garish, but less expensive, 4-star Alfaros, also in the Judería, which has very low internet rates.

Do a search of the discount booking sites for the best prices. If you're a B&B only type, then choose the very small Hotel Lola, above the Taberna Casa Pepe (hotelconencantolola.com)

Popular Day Excursions from Sevilla

The Dancing Horses of Andalucia

Real Escuela Andaluza del Arte Ecuestre - This is a spectacular display of dressage of the beautiful Carthusian horses, cousins to the Lipizzaner Stallions of the Spanish Riding School in Vienna, and their riders, in period costumes, “dancing” to classical music. It's called the Como bailan los caballos andaluces, held at the Real Escuela Andaluza del Arte Ecuestre, the 18th century Palacio de las Cadenas on Avenida de Abrantes. You can reserve via credit card by phone (Tel: 956 318 008), they speak English, or email and pick up tickets at box office, or book on line at: realescuelaorg.

Performances are held at noon every Thursday during the year and on Tuesdays from March to October. There is also a performance on Fridays from July 15 to October 31. The ballet lasts for 1-1/2 hours with a brief 10-minute intermission. These performances are extremely popular and often sell out a month or more in advance! The best seats are the up-close, €21 “preferencia” seats on both sides of the VIP seats, but other seats are priced at €13 and €17 and have great sightlines. When you pick up your tickets at the box office they will offer you an entrance ticked to the adjacent carriage museum, El Museo de Carruajes, as well. There is absolutely no videotaping or photography allowed during the performance, but they do sell books and tasteful souvenirs in the gift shop and posters of the horse ballet are sold at the coat and camera check stand. During intermission it's customary to sip a quick sherry at the bar, although run, don't walk. It gets utterly mobbed very quickly, as does the gift shop. You can watch them schooling, or visit the stables on other days.

If you want to do a little sightseeing around the city after the horse ballet, the Visit Jerez tour bus departs from in front of the Royal Equestrian School promptly following the show, at 1:30 p.m.

Roman Ruins of Itálica – The ruins can be found 8 kms north of the city, 15 minutes by bus from the Plaza de Armas station to the village of Santiponce. It's the first Roman colony in Spain, dating from 3rd century B.C., and birthplace of emperors Trajan and Hadrian. Amphitheater was originally designed with seating for up to 40,000, for a city with only 10,000 inhabitants at its epoxy in the 2nd century A.D. Open from October to March from 9:00 to 5:30, Tuesday to Saturday and from 10:00 to 4:00 on Sundays and holidays. Open April to September from 9:00 to 8:00 Tuesday to Saturday and from 9:00 to 3:00 on Sunday. Closed Monday.

White Villages - Although the Moorish pueblos blancos, perched on the hillsides along the route of the White Villages, are best seen after a stay in Seville, on route to the coast, or can be a wonderful destination in and of themselves (Grazalema, Ronda, Arcos, Gaucín), an Australian, Paul McGrath, does offer an all-day minibus tour of the white villages from Seville for 2-8 passengers. His tours have been well recommended by Rick Steves. theotherspain.galeon.com

Carmona – This is a lovely monument and mansion filled small city, a miniature Seville, filled with noble, stately homes. Be sure to visit the Roman necropolis at the western end of town and have drinks in the enclosed Moorish patio of the fortress Parador Alcázar de Pedro el Cruel. The Casal bus company runs hourly busses to Carmona from Sevilla's Prado de San Sebastián bus station. Open from September 15 to June 15, Tuesday to Friday from 9:00 to 4:45 and on weekends from 10:00 to 1:45. Also open from June 16 to September 14, Tuesday to Friday from 8:30 to 1:45 and on Saturday from 10:00 to 2:00.

Check the schedule at: diariodesevilla.com/transportes/trans\_autobuses.htm. The bus trip takes about one hour.

Bullfights in the Plaza de Toros

La Real Maestranza - Bullfights take place every Sunday afternoon at the beautiful La Maestranza Plaza de Toros, the Cathedral of Spanish bullfighting. The season runs from Easter Sunday to October 12, el Día de la Hispanidad. The most important corridas are held daily during the Feria de Sevilla, which usually occurs two weeks after Easter Sunday. Other important corridas are held on August 15 for La Virgen de los Reyes, the patron saint of Sevilla, the Feria de San Miguel, on the last weekend of September, and La Virgen del Pilar on October 12.

Sunday afternoon bullfights during the summer months are usually novilladas, novice bullfighters and young bulls. Tickets must be purchased at the Plaza ticket offices, or behind the bullring at Empresa Pages on Calle Adriano, or at any one of the official ticket booths you'll find around the city, such as the one next to the Hotel Simón on Calle García de Vinusal. 19, or the one located on the shopping street Calle Tetuán. Ticket booths charge a 20% markup. Tickets can usually be purchased on the day of the bullfight except on the above-mentioned dates. Some of the best matadors to see: El Juli, Rivera Ordoñez, Finito de Córdoba, Enrique Ponce, Manuel Díaz, El Cordobés, José Tomás. During the prestigious Easter fair, the corridas begin at 6:30, 7:00 during the summer.

The bullring offers 40-minute bilingual guided tours every day from 9:30 to 7:00 for €5. The tour includes a peak into the chapel and surgical room. There is a terrific gift shop with a large selection of bullfight and feria posters, matador's shoes and hat, zapatillas and monteras, and capotes, the pink/yellow matador's capes. It's a great stop for gifts and classy souvenirs. You can read about the history of the bullring at: realmaestranza.com.

My Sevilla Dining Guide

What to drink

- Fino or Amontillado - a dry sherry
- Manzanilla - a brand of sherry made in Sanlúcar de Barrameda
- Cruzcampo - a Spanish beer now owned by Guinness.

What to eat - distinctive Seville or Andalusian specialties

- Pescado frito - fried fish.
- Coquinas - clams in white wine/garlic sauce.
- Jamón Jabugo - a wonderful cured ham; the finest quality available is from the black hoofed pigs that have grazed on acorns in the province of Huelva. A favorite brand: 5 Jotas
- Espinacas con garbanzos - creamed spinach with chickpeas.
- Tortilla de camarones - a toasted thin omelet of baby shrimp.
- Berenjenas rellenas - meat filled fried eggplant.
- Salmorejo - a thick gazpacho from Córdoba with tiny chunks of cured ham.
- Pringá - an acquired taste. It's the boiled meats and sausages that accompany cocido, the Spanish version of pot-au-feu.
- Puntillas - fried baby squid.
- Mojama - pressed, dried and salted fish roe.
- Papas aliñás - cold boiled potatoes with tomato and green pepper dressing.
- Pincho moruno - shish kebab.

I've designated my recommended restaurants into the following categories with an estimated cost per person, including a glass of wine:

Tipping is not expected, as service is included in the bill but at the more elegant restaurants, diners sometimes leave an extra 5 per cent, but never more.

Cheap: €15 - €20

Inexpensive: €20 - €30

Moderate: €35 - €45

Expensive: €50 - €70

Very expensive-special occasion

splurge: €80 - €100 +

My Favorite Dining Spots

Temples of Haute Cuisine

Egaña-Oriza - San Fernando, 41, is attached to walls of Alcázar Palace and adjacent to the Murillo gardens (restauranteoriza.com), directly across the avenue from the University Fábrica de Tabacos, of the opera Carmen fame. There is a gorgeous conservatory/winter garden dining room with a soaring ceiling covered in a beautiful, white iron grillwork. Expect perfect service from the attentive, suave maitre d' and the well-trained staff. There is also an extensive wine list for your pleasure. This is one of our very favorites for a classy, sit-down meal, or for gourmet tapas at the Bar España. The food may be slightly better at Taberna, Poncio, or Salvador Rojo, but the Basque cuisine from chef-owner José María Egaña is par excellence and the overall experience; cuisine, service, décor, ambience, is absolutely lovely. It's also a great location for people watching, as the patrons are the movers and shakers, the aristocrats of Seville society. It may seem a little on the expensive side, at €100 for 2, but it's well worth the experience. It lost its Michelin star rating, but still merits at least one. Campsa guide gives it 12 soles (suns). Gourmetour: 8 out of a possible 10. Count on an average check of €50 pp. Closed Saturday lunch, Sundays and August. Tel: 954 227 211

For that special occasion, a romantic evening or unforgettable dinner in a glorious oasis outside of town.

Hacienda Benazuza El Bulli Resort - If you'd like to pull out ALL of the stops, then head for Sanlúcar la Mayor, located just 15 minutes outside of Sevilla, where you'll find the "Hacienda Benazuza El Bulli Resort (hbenazuza.com), a gorgeous, grand country estate surrounded by olive groves. It consists of a 10th century Moorish villa with a Renaissance wing filled with British antiques and beautiful Spanish tiles, a 17th century church, stables, and scores of secluded patios, groves of orange trees and gardens with reflecting pools affording lots of privacy. A real oasis. Stunning to behold. The hotel could be full, but you'd never know it. It has a Moorish feel, including the Arab gandura and babuchas at your bedside instead of the customary robe and slippers. The best part, it boasts a very elegant, white-glove restaurant, La Alqueria, which is overseen in the winter by the super famous chef, Ferrán Adriá of El Bulli in Roses, on the Costa Brava.

He has installed Rafael Morales, his chef de cuisine for 7 years at El Bulli, as executive chef. Seville friends took us here and our dinner was truly memorable because of the service, the surroundings, the amazing antique filled parlor where we had our pre-dinner drinks, and our post dinner tour of the hotel. Certainly worth the taxi ride. The Sultan of Brunei rented out the whole estate for his visit to Seville's Expo in '92. It has four red Michelin gables and is a member of Leading Hotels of the World. Closed for lunch Sundays, Mondays and February. Has a tasting menu for €66. Gourmetour gives it 8.5 out of 10 and it receives a 7.5 rating from Spain's leading restaurant critic, Rafael García Santos, only one of two Seville area spots appearing in the prestigious Lo Mejor de la Gastronomía (Best of Spanish Gastronomy) guide.

Salvador Rojo - Calle San Fernando, 23, in front of Hotel Alfonso XII is small and chic, with room for only 40 diners. The chef-owner, who spent time in the kitchen of Hacienda Benazuza El Bulli, opened his own eponymous place. Esmeralda, his wife, manages the room. Creative Andalusian cuisine and one of city's top five, but be prepared for the spartan décor. Nice wine list, heavy on sherries. There is also a cigar menu. Try the degustación menu for €42. Closed on Sundays and all of August. Tel: 954 229 725

Az-Zait - Plaza San Lorenzo, has been recently lauded as one of Seville's very best. Its name means "olive oil" in Arabic. Nice breads served with world-class olive oil. Try the white gazpacho, ajoblanco, with melon sorbet. You might choose to skip the dessert and opt for their excellent cheese course. Tel: 954 906 475

La Taberna del Alabardero - Zaragoza, 20, is housed in a 19th century mansion once belonging to the poet J. Antonio Cavestany (tabernadelalabardero.es). There is a central patio and a very pretty fin de siècle decor in the upstairs dining rooms. The cuisine is Basque inspired and there are branches in Madrid, Puerto Banús, Benahavís and D.C. One can eat from a very inexpensive, but very good value menu del día for €13 available only at mid-day in the downstairs bistro, prepared and served by students of the in house culinary/catering school. It offers 6 starters, 6 main courses and 3 desserts. The formal, upstairs dining room serves a tasting menu for €51, but for the same price, I prefer Egaña Oriza. Live music at night. Gourmetour gives it a rating of 8.5/10. Open daily, but closed during entire month of August. English menu is available. Tel: 954 502 721

Moderately Priced to Moderately Expensive Dining

Poncio - across the river in Triana at Calle Victoria, 8, has been featured in NY Times' "Dining In". It's a bit hard to find but is well worth the effort (ponciorestaurantes.com). The chef-owner is Paris trained. Wonderful desserts. Receives 1 sol (sun) from the prestigious Campsa guide. Opened in '98 and has received rave reviews on the Spain forum of Egullet.org. Closed Sunday, Monday dinner and all of Holy Week. It offers a tasting menu for 45€ Tel: 954 340 010

Abantal - Alcalde José de la Bandera, 7, next to Luis Montoto in the Nervión quarter. The young chef, Julio Fernández Quintero, has received very good reports for his new wave, creative Andalusian fare served in a contemporary, sophisticated setting with well spaced tables (abantalrestaurante.es). Home made sorbets. Average check: €38. English menu available. Closed Sunday dinner, Monday, April Fair and first 3 weeks of August. Tel: 954 540 000

La Sopa Boba - Torneo, 85, is new and innovative in two atmospheres, one informal, and the other elegant.

Casa Robles - Alvarez Quintero, 58, near the cathedral, is a mix of traditional Andalusian cuisine and a few more innovative dishes. Great desserts. Very popular among locals in the know, but its location brings in plenty of tourists as well and is highly recommended by many hotel concierges. Recommended dishes are foie gras with Pedro Jiménez, Dorada (baked porgy) and solomillo de cerdo (pork filet). A tasting menu is available. Gourmetour rating: 7/10. English menu available. Expect an average check of €36 pp. Tel: 954 213 150 casa-robles.com

Los Cuevas - (yes "los", not a grammatical mistake), is at Virgen de las Huertas, 1, on the corner of Paraíso, behind the Plaza de Cuba on the west side of the Guadalquivir in the Los Remedios district, on the other side of the avenue from Triana. Be sure to take along a good map. The chef is the owner's wife. Have the waiter bring you what is best for the day. There is a tapas bar with a tiny 5-table dining room in back.

El Espigón - Bogotá, 1, is a newcomer getting lots of good press, Gourmet, NY Times, etc., for having the freshest, best fish in town. Try the urt, a trout-like fish, or the guiso marinero, a bouillabaisse.

Two that tourists always seem to love because of ambiance more than food

La Albahaca - Plaza Santa Cruz, next to Los Gallos flamenco tablao (andalunet.com/la-albahaca). Has a pretty décor in an elegant townhouse-palace on the prettiest square in the heart of the Barrio de Santa Cruz. Tourists love it because it's so fetching and romantic. Innovative Basque cuisine getting better and better. Closed Sundays. Tel: 954 220 714

Corral del Agua - Callejón del Agua, 6, is also in the Barrio de Santa Cruz, adjacent to the Alcázar, with the same owners as La Albahaca. It's a bit of a cutesy-touristy place, but also an oasis. The patio is filled with wishing wells, grape arbors and flickering lanterns. They offer a nice garlic and almond soup, ajo blanco, as well as a nice shellfish soup, zarzuela de mariscos. Menus are in English. Closed Sundays.

Tapas hopping

Tapas in Barrio Santa Cruz

Modesto - Cano y Cueto, 5, near Murillo Gardens in the Santa Cruz quarter is very near the Casas de la Judería hotel. The outdoor terrace is always jam packed with locals at night. Great fried fish platters, pescaíto frito. Try the small clams steamed in garlic and white wine, coquinas, you'll lap up the sauce! This is not gourmet, white tablecloth cuisine, but simply a very lively and dependable local bar serving primarily fish and shellfish, with slightly chaotic service. The waiters are very, very busy, bustling about, but are nevertheless able to handle the constant stream of diners. It's the favorite local tapas bar of the owner of Casa 7, a sherry baron, scion of the González Byass sherry dynasty, who could well afford to dine elsewhere. Its recipe for saucy clams and shrimp with wild mushrooms almejas negras al Marqués de Villalúa has been featured in Food & Wine magazine.

Casa Román - Plaza de los Venerables, along with the Bodeguita Romero, is one of the best local places for the fabulously bitter jamón Jabugo, but go elsewhere for other tapas. It is a delightful square in the heart of the Barrio Santa Cruz with outdoor tables and is always lively. This is an adorable little square, which you should definitely see in you're wandering through the Santa Cruz quarter.

Tapas near the Cathedral

Bar Estrella - Estrella, 3 (same owners as Bar Giralda). Have mariposas de caviar, or pate de cabracho. Unusual tapas, not so frequented by the tourist trade as the Bar Giralda. It specializes in seafood tapas, such as boquerones fritos, small fried anchovies.

Tapas in the heart of downtown Sevilla

Bodeguita Casablanca - Adolfo Rodríguez Jurado 12, next to the Archivo de Indias. Opened by the youngest son of the family who ran the much-praised bar-restaurant Casablanca on Zaragoza, 50, now closed. This is the spin off tapas bar, continuing in the same vein. Open 7 until midnight. Closed Saturday, Sunday and all of August. Tel: 954 224 114

Robles Placentines - Placentines, 2 (casa-robles.com). Head up Calle Alvarez Quintero from the Cathedral, bear right onto the Argote de Molina then left on Placentines. Family owned and popular with locals, it offers extraordinary fish and has a value priced menú del día. There is also a tapas bar downstairs decorated with sherry barrels and hams hanging from the ceiling. The upstairs dining room has attractively presented gourmet cuisine and great desserts. Open daily from noon to 2:00 am. Pretty much an institution. It has the same owners as the Casa Robles at Alvarez Quintero, 58, (for a sit down meal. Gourmetour gives it a 7/10 rating) as well the new, smaller Robles Tapas overlooking cathedral square.

Bodeguita Romero - Harinask, 10, in the El Arenal quarter near the bullring is known for their great jamón and tortilla de camarones. It's great, with a lively atmosphere, particularly around 8:30 to 9:00, right after the bullfights.

Bodeguita Antonio Romero - Gamazo, 16, is also near the bullring in the El Arenal quarter. Very classy with an elegant tapas bar that attracts a well-heeled, loyal local crowd, particularly after the bullfights at the Real Maestranza. Sample the tapas at the bark, or reserve a few days ahead of time for one of the highly coveted tables in the back dining room. Same crowd, same family as Bodeguita Romero.

Enrique Becerra - Gamazo, 2, is also near the bullring in the El Arenal quarter and is has a very lively tapas bar and dining room (enriquebecerra.com). The specialty is lamb in honey sauce. This is another Sevilla classic that is very popular with tourists. English menus are available. Its recipe for lamb meatballs with mint, Albóndigas de cordero a la hierbabuena, has been featured in Food & Wine magazine and their spinach with chickpeas recipe, espinacas con garbanzos, and honeyed roast lamb with spinach and pine nuts, cordero asado a la miel relleno de espinacas y piñones, in Saveur. Another standout is the eggplant, zucchini and peppers, -alboronía. Closed Sundays and August 7-21. Tel: 954 213 049

Tapas near the Palacio de las Dueñas, off the Plaza Ponce de León Worth the journey

El Rinconcillo - Calle Gerona, 40, was founded in 1670 and is oldest tapas bar in Sevilla. It's a place filled with Old World ambiance, supposedly where the custom of "tapas" began and is still attracting a loyal local crowd and a few tourists. Be sure to sample the delicious espinacas con garbanzos, spinach with chickpeas, which is served in a Cazuela dish, or the pavía de bacalao, cod fritters. Tab will be chalk written on ancient wooden counter. Old sherry barrels that serve as stand up tables. Owners will be opening a new restaurant soon. Open from 1:00 pm – 1:30 am Closed Wednesday.

Taberna Coloniales - Is a tiny place with outdoor tables facing the Plaza Cristo de Burgos, 19, near the Casa de Pilatos, around the corner from the Casa del Maestro Hotel. Delicious tapas. Attracts locals only.

Tapas in Triana

Albariza - Betis, 6, at the very end of Betis, across the Guadalquivir River in the Triana district via the Puente de San Telmo Bridge. Here you'll find chalk white walls, sherry casks as tables and hams hanging from the ceiling. There are 42 varieties of tapas on the list. Try the tiny lamb chops, chuletillas de cordero, or shrimp omelets, tortilla de camarones, with green peppers. Was recently reviewed in NY Times. Michel Rostang, the famous Parisian chef, has dined here. The clientele is very chic and it's always packed.

Tapas near San Lorenzo church and Alameda de Hércules Park

Bar Eslava - Calle Eslava, 5, is a very popular spot with a legendary, but minuscule tapas bar with a dining room in back. Have their pudín de espinacas con béchamel, (stuffed fritters), solomillo al cabrales, (filet mignon in blue cheese sauce), or merluza con ajetes (hake with garlic shoots). Closed Sundays and during August.

Shopping Guide

Mantillas and Silk hand embroidered shawls

- Feliciano Foronda – On pedestrian Calle Sierpes, 67, or Alvarez Quintero, 44.
- Bordados Foronda - Argote de Molina, 20.
- Juan Foronda - Calle Tetuán, 28. Has a web site: sierpes.com/foronada/index.htm.
- Blasfor – Calle Sierpes, 79.

Fans - Casa Rubio – Calle Sierpes.

Flamenco Dresses (or trajes de gitana for a Halloween party or costume ball)

- Candela - Calle Harinas, 34.
- Lina - Calle de los Lineros, 17.
- Pardales - Calle Cuna, 23.
- Azahares - Cuna, 31.
- Trajes Sevillanos - Cerrajería, 65, between Calle Sierpes & Cuna.

Guitars

- Manuel Vela Martínez - Calle Bordadores, 3.
- Casa de los Artesanos - Across the river in Triana, on Calle Covadonga, by Andrés Domínguez.

Riding gear - López - Calle Cuna 34

Antiques

- Moro Gonzales – Downtown on Calle Placentines.
- Antigüedades Lola Ortega - under the arches of the Plaza del Cabildo / Quepo de Llano, 22.

Perfume and Cologne

- Jasmine scented Agua de Sevilla, which opened a new store on San Fernando, 3, in an old palace, where in the library you can have a fino and tapas while shopping. There are also the fragrances Carmen, Abril, or Victorio y Lucchino by Victorio y Lucchino, the Seville fashion designers, available at any perfumería.

Pottery and Tiles

- Cerámica Santa Ana - San Jorge, 31 in the Plaza del Callao, across the Guadalquivir River in the Triana district. This best-known shop sells replicas of 16th century designs.

- Cerámicas Rocío - Also located in the Triana district at Calle Antillano, 8.
- Santa Isabel - Calle Alfarería, 12, the street of the potters.
- Cerámica Isabel Ruiz - sells pottery with hunting motifs, San Jorge, 27.

Rest/refueling stop while shopping - Confitería La Campana on Calle Sierpes, 1, for pastries, morning coffee and ice creams.

My Guide to Sevilla Nightlife

Flamenco

Internationally renowned flamenco artists to search out - Eva Yerbabuena, Sara Baras, Antonio Canales, Tomatito (guitar), Paco de Lucía (guitar), María Pagés, Lola Greco, Belén Maya, Farruquito, Cristina Hoyos, Joaquín Cortés.

Museo del Baile Flamenco - An '06 creation of flamenco legend Cristina Hoyos, star of Carlos Saura's flamenco movies, Carmen and Blood Wedding, and current director of the Ballet Flamenco de Andalucía. It's a private initiative but subsidized by city hall and the Andalusian regional government. It offers VIP nights with a special tour of the museum, a flamenco performance by top talent accompanied by wine and tapas.

The museum, located at Manuel Rojas Marcos, 3, is open for touring from 9:00 am – 7:00 pm. Consult museoflamenco.com for upcoming performances.

Casa de la Memoria de Al Andalus - is a genuine and noteworthy venue for authentic flamenco housed in an 18th century palace, converted into the Moorish Cultural Center on Ximénez de Enciso, 28. Has received very good reviews. Performances are given nightly at 9:00.

Los Gallos - Plaza de Santa Cruz, 11, across from the Albahaca restaurant, in the heart of the Barrio de Santa Cruz. This is a traditional flamenco show, a “tablao”, a nightclub with a floorshow geared almost exclusively to tourists. There are two shows each evening, but for more authenticity, try the late show.

El Arenal - Calle Rodó, 7, near the bullring, has shows at 9:00 and 11:00 nightly (tablaoelarenal.com). The show and drink costs €30,50. Locals say this show is better than what happens at Los Gallos, and it also offers table seating, which to me is more pleasant and intimate than being seated in rows, theater style.

For impromptu late-night flamenco sessions (singing - not a floor show)
Not filled with tourists

La Carbonería - Leviés, 18, is only a few blocks from the Santa María la Blanca church. There's no sign above the red doors. Open weekends until 3 am. It's a converted coal warehouse turned into bar with two large rooms and an inviting inner courtyard where the local musicians hang out and where impromptu flamenco jam sessions are held from around 11 pm to midnight, but the show may start as late as midnight. It attracts a lively, young local crowd, plus a smattering of foreign University students.

Casa Anselma - Calle Pagés del Corro, 49, is four blocks back from Calle Betis in Triana, the old gypsy quarter on the other side of the Guadalquivir River, where there's communal singing and revelry, but you need to go very late, after midnight. Owned by a flamenco artist. Look for the façade of bright Andalusian tiles. Not touristy like the tablaos.

Bar Perejil - next to the Hotel Don Paco, owned by a flamenco cantaor.

Bar El Tamboril - Plaza Santa Cruz next to the Tablao Los Gallos is a lively late night bar where you can watch the locals dance "Sevillanos" and listen to flamenco, or salsa.

For impromptu flamenco you can wander through the Triana district on the west side of the Guadalquivir River to the local bars, such as Lo Nuestro on riverfront Calle Betis, 31. Don't go too late.

Simpecao - Paseo de la O near the Iglesia de la O in Triana is a hangout for the young.

For three weeks in September, on even numbered years, Sevilla is host to the internationally famous Bienal de Flamenco, in which most of the top names in flamenco dance and music participate.

Dance

Teatro Lope de Vega - located at the entrance to the Parque de María Luisa, is where internationally known flamenco artists such as Antonio Canales and Tomatito often performed during season and during the three week long Bienal de Flamenco in September of even-numbered years. You can check the schedule in the free newspaper El Giradillo (available on-line at: elgiradillo.es, or in The Tourist, which is available in all hotels. You can also check the schedule for famed flamenco performers at Teatro Central on the Isla de la Cartuja (teatrocentral.com).

Opera

Teatro de la Maestranza Opera House - right on the Paseo Colón, next to bullring, was built for 92 World's Fair (controversial architecture). The season opens in October (teatromaestranza.com).

My Recommend Sevilla Lodging

Here are my favorite Sevilla hotels in all price ranges

Note: Holy Week and Feria are extremely popular in Sevilla and throughout Andalusia. Hotels are usually booked several months in advance and charge 3 to 4 times their normal rates, which is typical during most major festivals in Spain.

In the Barrio Santa Cruz

High End to Moderate

4-star Las Casas del Rey de Baeza - Very stylish, luxury 44-room designer hotel tucked away on a cobbled square in a quiet, very authentic residential northeastern portion of the Barrio. It was reconverted in '01 into a charming boutique hotel by the Hospes group (hospes.es) who have reconverted mansions into hotels in Valencia, Alicante, Madrid, Córdoba and Granada (coming soon: Málaga, Jerez and eventually Pamplona). The location is quiet, a very pleasant 10 to 15-minute walk from the cathedral area, in a non-touristy, non-commercial district. The mansion was built by King Fernando III as a gift to the King of Baeza and is adjacent to the Jesús de la Rendención church. In the center of this lovely home are three courtyards; the rooms face the courtyard around galleried walkways and up narrow stairways. The building is typically Andalusian white washed with woodwork painted in blue gray. The windows have sea grass blinds, giving it a faintly colonial feel. Rooms have slate floors, iron beds, flat screen TVs, DVDs and CD players, while in the baths you'll find robes, mosaic tiles and "rain forest" showers. Furnishings are a mixture of ultra modern, Andalusian (simple straw rugs, straw window shades) and Indonesian. Suites are spacious and luxurious, perfect for honeymooners. The piece de resistance is their lovely and relaxing rooftop pool area with views of the Giralda.

Lots of quiet inner patios, several downstairs sitting rooms filled with modish cinnamon colored leather sofas, very attractive, full service restaurant. Breakfast includes daily specials plus buffet. The black suited female staff is snap-to professional, fluent in English and very friendly, especially Esperanza, the housekeeping supervisor and Cristina at the front desk. It gets top rating from El País hotel critic. We've sent friends here who have really enjoyed it. It is featured in the Karen Brown "charming hotels of Spain" guide, Louis Vuitton Spain guide and is a member of both Tablet Hotels and Great Small Hotels.

Moderate

4-star Las Casas de la Judería - Callejón de Dos Hermanas, Barrio de Santa Cruz, is a 3-star full service hotel, consisting of a series of converted ducal palaces, the former home of the Duque de Béjar -opened for the '92 Worlds Fair (intergroupoteles.com). It now has almost 100 guest rooms grouped around romantic interior patios. Hard to find because it's very secluded in the Barrio de Santa Cruz. Near Santa María la Blanca church, off the Plaza de Santa María la Blanca, down the tiny Callejón de Dos Hermanas. Valet will be looking out for cars trying to come in to the Callejón and will grab one's car and whisk it away to the underground parking garage (for an extra charge). It also houses a full-scale restaurant and piano bar with music each evening from 6:00 - 7:00. Very well run and well maintained, just what the doctor ordered for first timers (and non-Spanish speakers) to Seville. It's handy to great tapas bars in the neighborhood, such as Modesto for seafood, Bar España of the Egaña Oriza Restaurant and Casa Román for Jabugo ham.

There are plant and fountain filled courtyards and open verandas with wicker sofas. Elegant bedrooms, very comfy. Room No. 29 has its own terrace while No. 30 is a suite with chairs and table in entryway and Oriental rug, plus small balcony. Note: some people find some rooms "too dark and gloomy", so ask to see your room before committing. It belongs to the Casas y Palacios Intercrop collection, along with the Casas de los Mercaderes. Noted as being the "best bang for your buck" in the city. It now has an outdoor pool. Another Karen Brown favorite (karenbrown.com).

1-star (but don't let that fool ya!!) Casa del Maestro - Stayed here 4 nights during Holy Week. It's located between Casa de Pilatos and Santa Catalina church, on a truly tiny, one block long pedestrian street called Almudena, about 15 minute walk to the Cathedral or 5 minutes to the shopping district. Nice tapas bars are also walking distance, such as El Rinconcillo on Gerona. This is an utterly charming but very small (only 11 rooms), completely authentic Andalusian home formerly belonging to famed flamenco guitarist, Niño Ricardo. You enter through an elaborate wrought iron door onto a lovely tiled courtyard where there are a few tables for breakfast and around it, a minuscule reception room and a very minute, nicely furnished parlor lounge with a sofa and an honesty bar (for a glass of Rioja, a whiskey or a gin tonic) and a computer terminal. The decor is simple but very stylish, nice furnishings and wall colors.

The feel is that of a true Sevillain traditional home. There are two floors of guest rooms upstairs in galleries around the courtyard and a delightful rooftop terrace where you can have breakfast overlooking the Giralda and Cathedral in the distance. No elevator and a very narrow staircase, which accounts mainly for the fact that the hotel only gets one star in the official classification from the government tourism agency.

The rooms are all individually and lovingly decorated and named (the decorator, wife of Niño Ricardo's grandson, had deep pockets) with design furniture, high quality linens and upholstery, some having canopy beds. Our room, Tierra Minera also had a sofa, coffee table, Persian rug and beautiful enormous Moroccan ceramic water vessel and faced the street. The bathrooms are decorated in flowery tiles, the toiletry sets are from Escada and there are fresh flower vases. There is daily evening turndown service with pitcher of ice water and chocolates, satellite TV, individually controlled heating and a/c which really works, breakfast brought to your room by the white-jacketed (Tunisian?) butler, unless you want to have it in the rooftop terrace. Service is very personal and familiar, like being a guest in a private home. Some people might not like this type of service, preferring the convenience of a larger hotel with more amenities. Price wise, it is at the level of most 3-4 star hotels in town but delivers very high quality for the money. It belongs to the Rusticae group (rusticae.es), a lovely collection of small Spanish hotels with charm and character, which can be booked easily through Inns of Spain (innsospain.com). It's also a selection of Lugares Divinos, as is the Cortijo Soto Real in Utrera, and it's featured in Alistair Sawday's Special Places to Stay/Spain guide. See pictures of the rooms here: casadelmaestro.com.

3-star Casa 7 - Calle Vírgenes, 7, Barrio de Santa Cruz, in the heart of Santa Cruz quarter but with NO parking garage of it's own (casanumero7.com). A very special, private, "not for children", home away from home owned by the very suave scion of the regal González Byass sherry family of Jerez, don Gonzalo González y Gordon who oozes with aristocratic charm, is very, very British and outrageously well-connected. Mom is a Gordon (Gordon's gin), and he's left (sterling) framed pictures of Prince Phillip, King Alfonso XIII and King Juan Carlos in the parlor, all intimate family friends. He's decorated the six rooms of the three-story manor with his own personal family heirlooms, priceless oils, antiques, and Orientals. Everything is exquisite, down to the last detail, but also totally impractical for a hotel (didn't dare take that gorgeous, irreplaceable crystal decanter of bath gel into the shower for fear it would break). Had to use a step stool to hang clothes in the closets since they were built for ball gowns. Casa 7 started out as a privileged, private pied-a-terre for his ruling class British pals (guest book remarks make an interesting read - "Dear Gonzalo, lovely stay-no children, no Americans!"), but then he opened it up to us commoners (only God knows why).

It's right down the street from Casas de la Judería in the heart of the Barrio de Santa Cruz. The 170-euro rate includes VAT tax & full English breakfast (scrambled or fried eggs, breads, jams, ham, freshly squeezed juice). During our stay we had 2 sweet, shy white-jacketed Ecuadorian servants/butlers at our constant beck and call (just opened our room door and they magically appeared) to do laundry, fetch drinks, make phone calls, all at no extra charge. They're brothers, and we grew quite fond of them. Hope they're still on duty. Others we've sent here have loved them too. Plus at cocktail time in the formal parlor we had the pleasure of Don Gonzalo's engaging company, his stories about being shipped off at age 12 to England to clean toilets (had to learn the value of money and hard work) and his dining/entertainment advice. We even joined him and his wife for dinner at Modesto. He had just come back from a big game hunting safari in Africa and salmon fishing in Scotland, so he may not be in attendance during your stay. He has opened another beautiful B&B, Casa Viña de Alcántara, in a former hunting lodge on the edge of his family's vineyards outside of Jerez de la Frontera.

However, two caveats here: if Gonzalo is off on one of his world adventures, it's not quite the same experience if you don't get to meet him, chat and sip sherry. His favorite formal restaurant is the Egaña-Oriza and for casual dining/tapas, he prefers Modesto. British Tatler magazine called it "one of the best small hotels in the world". Also the new house manager isn't reportedly as knowledgeable about the city as the staff at the Judería or Amadeus, and since the guests are primarily British, it may appear to some Americans as too British or even too formal, stuffy. It's not a place for families, and it's not a place for those who must have sat. TV, CD player, video games, internet access, constant activity. Like something out of Noel Coward, a rather unique experience. It's featured in Alistair Sawday's Special Places to Stay/Spain guide and is a member of Great Small Hotels. Can be booked through Inns of Spain (innsofspain.com), where one can read the guest reviews.

4-star Posada del Lucero - On Almirante Apodaca, near the Plaza Cristo de Burgos on the very upper edges of the Santa Cruz quarter and around the corner from the Casa del Maestro, a quiet, residential location (posadalucero.com). It's a '06 entry into the Seville design hotel scene, brought by owners of the Hotel Rey Alfonso X. It is housed in former inn of the 17th century and is done in sleek, minimalist style. The 38 rooms and 3 jr. suites offer a/c, safes, minibars, king size beds, free daily press and evening turndown service, internet access, bare floors, walnut woods, textiles from prestigious Gastón y Daniela, and the baths are done in a sleek white and slate color palette. Rates include buffet breakfast. Other hotel amenities include a coffee shop, 24-hour room service, solarium and free daily press.

Upper Budget

3-star Hotel Amadeus - Calle Farnesio 6, Barrio de Santa Cruz, new, sweet little 19-room B&B with a musical (piano-Mozart) theme and owned by a mother-daughter team (hotellamadeussevilla.com). It is situated on a tiny, narrow street in the heart of the Barrio de Santa Cruz at Farnesio. 6, near the Casas de la Judería and Santa María la Blanca church, a terrific location. It's a less expensive option, kind of a "budget boutique". Attractive downstairs parlor with typical and very pretty Andalusian tiled patio fitted with grand piano for special evening concerts, given usually twice a week, also a music library and practice room. The rooms are supposed to be sound-proofed, but if you want to come back to your room for an early evening siesta, you may be disturbed by music from downstairs, classical music playing in the background. The evening manager is particularly sweet, and in general the staff gets high reviews for kindness and attention to detail. A Fodor's poster was unhappy with his attic suite, called the "ático" on the web page, but otherwise the rooms get very nice reviews.

The Jr. suite on the 3rd floor, 2nd floor in Europe, is especially nice, the one with green floral bedding and an exposed beam ceiling and others have enjoyed the 2nd floor Maria Callas room. The blue room pictured on the web site, with piano, has a large bathroom and is on the 3rd floor. Nice, fluffy towels. Downstairs room is rather narrow lacks privacy since it's off the hall on the way from the parlor where concerts are held to the back sitting room, but the upstairs rooms are quite nice and antique filled. Twin beds put together to make doubles with antique headboards. There is an Elevator. Lovely roof top terrace overlooks the Giralda tower of the cathedral. Received a nice write up in British Condé Nast Traveler and is also a Rick Steves favorite, so book far in advance. Although their rates for Holy Week and the April fair go up to €160, that tariff is still moderate when compared to the competition's rates for those dates. The owners have opened an annex, La Música, around the corner with 6 exterior (somewhat noisy at night) and 6 interior (patio) rooms. All of the rooms here have a plasma TV. Check in is done at the Amadeus, where breakfast is taken, either in the lobby or the rooftop terrace. Both can be booked with Inns of Spain (innsofspain.com) where guest reports have been highly favorable.

3 star Hotel Alcántara - Calle Ximénez de Enciso, 28, Barrio de Santa Cruz, is as new as the Hotel Amadeus, but entirely different in ambience (hotelalcantara.net). It has a pared down, contemporary, “dorm-chic” type IKEA style with spare décor and hospital mounted TVs in the bedrooms but also has a lovely interior courtyard (if somewhat sparsely decorated too) and an equally great location in the heart of the Santa Cruz quarter. No balcony rooms. A former 18th century seigniorial mansion, it was reconverted into a hotel three years ago. A Fodor friend stayed there for 4 nights during Holy Week and was happy. It's €80 tariff for a double is a good value, but for the same money I'd choose the Amadeus for more charm and typical Sevilla character. A great flamenco venue, Casas de la Memoria, is located on the same street. This hotel, along with many of my favorites, can be booked through Inns of Spain (innsofspain.com), and guest reviews have been quite positive. It's also a Rick Steves favorite, keeping it constantly filled.

Budget

2-star Hotel Doña Manuela - Paseo Catalina de Ribera 2, nicely located next to the Murillo Gardens and adjacent to my favorite tapas bar/restaurant, Modesto, and a member of the Modesto hostelry group. It has 19 pleasant rooms with a/c, in-room safe, flat screen sat. TV. Three superior rooms on the top floor have their own private verandas (hoteldmanuel.com). The building has an elevator and WiFi access. The Holy Week/April Fair double room rates are only €159 actually a decent value for Seville's “extra season”. Continental breakfast costs an additional €5.

2-star Hostería del Laurel - This is another convenient, economical option right on the prettiest square in the Barrio, above the bar/restaurant Hostería del Laurel of the Don Juan legend (hosteriadellaurel.com). In the beginning of the play, where Don Juan would hold court and boast about his many conquests and where the famous bet was made that he could capture the heart of a young nun. Downstairs is atmospheric bar with hanging hams. There is a menu in English for tourists, not Seville's very finest cuisine, but still good. 22 rooms open onto a courtyard. Simple décor, marble baths and unadorned marble floors and A/C. Under €80 for a double, and prices are not outrageously gouged during Feria, or Holy Week. There are also apartments available. But check recent guest reviews on Trip Advisor, as all have not been positive.

2-star Un Patio en Santa Cruz – Can be found on pedestrianized Calle Doncellas, near the 4-star Casas de la Judería (patioensantacruz.com). It is a new (in) '05 budget option in the quarter that provides far more comfort than many hostels. It's housed in a completely renovated 19th century building, its 13 rooms distributed on three floors around a central atrium. The hotel is equipped with an elevator. The stark white lobby with marble floor is made more inviting and cheery with hanging flowerpots and contemporary artwork. Smallish guest rooms offer a/c, satellite TV (including CNN), phone, safe, free WiFi (but no desk for one's laptop), Ikea style furnishings and bare hardwood floors. Most rooms are interior with windows facing the atrium rather than the street. Some guests have complained about noise coming from the atrium. The few exterior rooms keep the street noise at bay with double glazed windows. Two top floor rooms have direct access to the roof top terrace with its views of the cathedral. The terrace is furnished with lounge chairs and a fridge, and guests can purchase drinks at the reception desk to enjoy on the terrace. The hotel does not serve breakfast, but it's situated around the corner from Las Doncellas bakery, and cafés abound in the vicinity. For €85 per night, this small hotel offers a good value, but not all reviews on Trip Advisor have been glowing. One should always check the guest reviews on Inns of Spain as well as on Trip Advisor before booking.

Hostal Callejón del Agua - Calle Coral del Rey, 23, a quiet street in the heart of the quarter, is perhaps a better choice in terms of style, sophistication and comfort than the two 2 star budget hotels mentioned above. Because of its architectural limitations, it can only be classified as a hostel, but it offers many amenities of a “budget boutique” hotel. Housed in a 19th century typical Seville residence, it was very nicely reconverted in '06. Downstairs you'll find a lovely central patio with fountain, and the 16 rooms are distributed among three floors (no elevator), up the lovely original staircase. Each is named for a particular brotherhood of Holy Week. One room is handicapped accessible, and the doubles have either a double bed or two singles. They've been stylishly decorated and all are exterior. Some have balconies facing the quiet street. All provide the same amenities: free WiFi, a/c, satellite TV, hair dryers in baths (but no make up mirror or fancy toiletries). There are no in-room safes but one can leave valuables in the reception desk safe.

As do most all of my favorite Seville hotels, the Callejón has a roof top terrace furnished with tables and chairs where one can enjoy a drink purchased from machines. The hostel does offer a simple, free continental breakfast consisting of coffee and pastries. For dining, almost endless opportunities are available in the neighborhood. This cheerful and pretty little place offers great value (a double for only €130) during Seville's “extra” season, Holy Week and April fair, when most hotels double or even triple their rates. The hostel is located around the corner from the charming Callejón del Agua restaurant and just one minute away from one of my favorite tapas bars, Bar Estrella. See the video presentation at callejondelagua.com.

Downtown

Luxury

5-star Westin Alfonso XII - Avenida San Fernando, 2, an old European, 150-room dowager Grande Dame, is a 5-star Grand Lux, neo-Moorish palace hotel built by Alfonso XII to house VIPS visiting the 1929 Ibero-American exhibition (westin.com). Now celebrities such as Julio & Enrique Iglesias stay here. Has a garden and pool and Grandiose Moorish-style public rooms. Grand, but showing its age a bit with some wear and tear (loose floor tiles, somewhat less than gleaming housekeeping in bar area), but is always crowded/busy. Westin needs to freshen it thoroughly to bring it up to Madrid's Westin Palace standards, but some won't stay anywhere else. All the society events and important news conferences take place here. Conventions too. Some members of the Royal Family stayed here when daughter was married in Seville's cathedral. Nice for an afternoon tea, or a Sunday brunch, but we found the bar rather dreary. Has a small branch of famous leather shop, "Loewe". Stay here only at a promotional rate using Bancotel coupons or by redeeming Starwood points.

Moderate

4-star Casa Romana - Trajano, 9, a few blocks above the top end of pedestrian Calle Sierpes, and a 10-minute walk from the Cathedral is a 4-star, 27 room property opened in September '04, with both modern and traditional wings and beautiful interior patios (hotelcasaromana.com). The name refers to the hotels owners, a noted family of jewelers, and its location on Calle Trajano, named after the Roman emperor. The stylish rooms, set around an interior patio with beautifully tiled fountain, all have satellite TV, minibar, safe, hair dryer and WiFi Internet access. Rooms in the historic wing face the street and are blessed with high ceilings. The elegant marble baths have double sinks. There's a rooftop terrace with a Jacuzzi for 8 and 24-hour room service and laundry. Room rates do run on the high side compared to my other favorites, and buffet breakfast costs an extra €17. Represented by Secret Places, Chic Retreats and the very reliable Inns of Spain (innsofspain.com), which lists it as a 4-flower property (lots of charm).

3 star Casas de los Mercaderes - Calle Alvarez Quintero, is a 3-star sister to Casas de la Judería, and living in the shadows of the other better-known hotels, but don't forget to include it in your hotel choices. Ideally situated near cathedral, Plaza Nueva, Alcázar, great walkable location on a pedestrian street in heart of downtown. Just as smart, up to date, attractive as it's sibling, light and airy with very elegant public rooms. Lots of sightseeing info available, pretty breakfast room. Rooms 1-6 have views; others face the interior patio and have no balcony. Nice designer décor. During Holy Week some processions pass right by the hotel. They offer a great breakfast buffet. This is another Karen Brown favorite (karenbrown.com) and a selection in the Louis Vuitton Spain guide. As does its Barrio de Santa Cruz sister, the 4-star Casas de la Judería, the hotel belongs to the Casas y Palacios boutique hotel group: intergroupoteles.com.

3-star Taberna del Alabardero - Calle Zaragoza. 20, is housed in a 19th century mansion built around a central patio above the famed restaurant of the same name (tabernadelalabardero.com). It is in a less pretty, captivating section of downtown, but has just 7 uniquely decorated rooms named for Andalusian cities. Some are large and bright, others rather gloomy. Opt for a deluxe room or suite; the Málaga suite has a separate living room with a fireplace. There is also a rooftop terrace.

Owned by the priest and King's confessor, Luis de Lezama, who runs his restaurant empire (Tabernas in Puerto Banús, Benahavís, Madrid, even Washington, D.C.) for his foundation, which benefits orphanages and underprivileged youth. This Taberna also houses his restaurant/hotel/catering school. Creative Basque cuisine in elegant 2nd floor dining rooms, plus lively, always crowded bistro downstairs serving a bargain menu del

día. Very busy 24/7 downstairs. Also featured in the Louis Vuitton Spain guide and a Karen Brown Spain guide favorite.

Upper Budget

3-star Hotel Alminar - The 12 room Alminar, which means “minaret” in Spanish, opened in March ‘05 as a sister to the Alcántara (hotelalminar.com). It's found down a quiet pedestrianized street, Alvarez Quintero, near Casa Robles, a stone's throw, 50 meters, from the cathedral. It has a small reception area and a side courtyard where breakfast is served and where you can relax with a complimentary coffee, soda, water or beer stored in the fridge. The compact but stylish rooms are decorated in minimalist style, baths done in green glass and are equipped with a/c, satellite TV, phones, minibar and Internet access. Two superior double rooms on the top floor have private terraces and Giralda views. Guests rave about the warm welcome received from the young, friendly and helpful English speaking desk staff. Breakfast costs an additional €6 and can be skipped due to the high number of cafes in the area. Solid Trip Advisor reviews. In fact, it and the Amadeus make it to the very top of Trip Advisor's popularity index, primarily because of their high price/quality ratio. Can also be booked through Inns of Spain and is featured in Alistair Sawday's Special Places to Stay/Spain guide. Note: The Alminar has a sister hotel on the Costa de la Luz, in Vejer de la Frontera, La Botica de Vejer.

2-star Hotel Adriano - Calle Adriano, 12, is located downtown on a street loaded with tapas bars and is just behind the beautiful bullring, Plaza de la Real Maestranza, a block from the Guadalquivir River in the El Arenal quarter (hoteladriano.net). Opened in '03; this lovely completely renovated Seville mansion is painted a pretty peach color. Has a pretty Andalusian style patio, a Jacuzzi on the top floor, a roof top terrace, a café with outdoor seating, and the 34 rooms are kept immaculate. They are furnished in traditional style, some with 4-poster beds. All have marble floors and offer in-room safes, satellite TV and baths with hair dryers.

Other Areas

La Macarena

3-star La Alcoba del Rey - A fairly new, 11-room “boutique” addition to the hotel scene, located not in the heart of the Santa Cruz district, but instead further north, in the Macarena district, next to the Macarena Basílica, and owned by an importer of Moroccan house ware. The interior patio is reminiscent of one at the Alcázar, and each room is individually decorated in high Andalusian (Moorish) style and named for a figure of Al Andalus culture. The Beatriz de Suabia room is said to be the most romantic, with a 4-poster bed. They all have Moroccan rugs, lamps and beds. Baths either have a stand alone tubs or semi-open showers integrated into the room. I have not yet inspected it, but it is represented by Rusticae and Inns of Spain and designated a 3-flower property. Rooms have all the mod cons (except for minibar), plus hotel provides Internet access, 24-hour room service and garage parking. Some reviews at Trip Advisor suggest that some rooms are now in need of attention. However, guests do praise the courteous and helpful staff. Set course meals are provided for €25. Breakfast can be skipped. If you fall in love with a piece of china, a crystal goblet, a lamp, your bed or your curtains, these items may be purchased and shipped home. The rates do run high for such an off-center location, a 20-minute walk from the cathedral, but breakfast is included in the tariff. See pictures at alcobadelrey.com. You can also book and read guest reviews at innsofspan.com. This property, along with the Casa del Maestro, is a recent addition to the Rusticae group.

Suites and Apartments handy for families

Suites del Maestro - Brand new apartments created by the owners of my favorite boutique hotel, Casa del Maestro, located near the cathedral on Hernando Col, a pedestrian only street (casadelmaestro.com). There are six apartments here; four of them sleep 4 guests (2-bedroom, 1-bath), 2 apartments sleep 2 (1-bedroom, 1-bath), and each is named for a flamenco master. The two apartments on the top floor, Lola Flores and Pepe Pinto, have private terraces overlooking the Giralda. All boast marble floors, bold color schemes, in bright blue and red, Turkish wall hangings, Moroccan brass lamps and cushions from India. The showers are tiny but bathrobes and slippers, along with deluxe toiletries, are provided. Living rooms have wall-mounted plasma TV and free WiFi. They are built around a central patio in a new building rather than an historic Andalusian home and provide the same high class and style as the Casa del Maestro. The kitchens come equipped with fridge, microwave and 2-burner stove.

As is the case of the Casa del Maestro, the reception desk is staffed only from 9:00 - 10:00, but when you arrive (by taxi!), a butler will greet you and escort you to your suite (via the elevator). Other amenities include minibar, daily cleaning and laundry service. During the high, high season, called “extra season”, Holy Week and Feria de Abril, rates range from €259 - €500, not a bad price at all for 4 people when room rates across the city triple. The Suites are a selection of Rusticae, Secret Places, Inns of Spain and i-escape.

Casa Abades – There are only two suites, sleeping two persons each, in this exclusive and historic, three-story luxury property decorated in Moorish-Andalusian style and represented by Secret Places (casaabades.com). It is located in the center of Sevilla across near the Cathedral and offers a living room with fireplace, satellite TV, CD player, a/c, tiny rooftop pool (dipping size) and barbeque grill. There is no daily maid service, but the owner provides clean sheets, pillows and towels for guests. Iron and ironing board and hair dryer, are also provided, along with free Internet access. Kitchenette has a stove with 4 burners and dishware for 4. A minimum of 3 nights is required.

Apartamentos Murillo - In the heart of the atmospheric Santa Cruz quarter on Reinos, 6, has 16 newly renovated, air conditional apartments with kitchenettes, located one block from the Murillo gardens (hotelmurillo.com). While offering a very good value for 3 (a tight fit for 4), Trip Advisor reviews suggest that visitors not book a ground floor apartment because of street noise and noise coming from the reception area. Second floor apartments, or those facing the back, are best. Elevator cannot access 3rd floor apartments. After 11:00 guests must go to the Hotel Murillo next door to access their apartment. Kitchenettes have full fridge, stove, coffee maker, microwave and dishware but no dishwasher. No Internet access or laundry facilities, no satellite TV (just Spanish channels). T.A. reviews do praise the young, energetic and helpful staff. Don't attempt to drive to the hotel, as it is situated on a pedestrianized street in the heart of the Moorish maze that is the Santa Cruz quarter.

Cortijos or Haciendas

Outside the city - within a 20-minute drive

Hacienda la Boticaria - Located between Alcalá de Guadaira and Utrera, 12 kms from Seville, is a beautiful, expensive and luxurious 5-star property on a gorgeous estate, owned by the Agua de Sevilla perfume firm, which keeps growing in both reputation and size (laboticaria-hotel.com). Now with 110 rooms and 29 suites it is surrounded by 4 gardens. There are several pools, stables and a complete riding program, spa and 18-hole golf course. The large rooms are outfitted with the finest in amenities, including bathrobes and high-speed Internet access. 24-hour room service, two restaurants including "El Molino Blanco" with a fantastic Basque chef and outstanding wine list, plus the more informal "Taberna de Sirio", located in the stables, plus convention facilities and helipad. The coach house has a collection of stunning antique carriages.

Cortijo Soto Real – This is another ultra deluxe, 5-star country house/hotel, with breathtaking views, located on a 5,000-acre estate outside of Utrera (cortijosotoreal.com). Nonstop activities include swimming in two pools, a complete spa with body treatments, gym, indoor pool, sauna, Jacuzzi and beauty salon, plus tennis, mountain biking, quads, 4X4 guided excursions, clay partridge shoots, carriage rides, and horseback riding. The resort has its own stables, Yeguada Marquesa. The main restaurant, Al Andalus, with exquisite Moorish décor, offers set priced dinners, while the Bistro del Jardín serves lunch under the rose covered pergolas by the pool. This palace property is the former home of an Algerian prince and now belongs to the Belgian director of HACE and decorated by the renowned Pascua Ortega. There are only 24 large rooms with 24-hour room service, high speed internet access, flat screen TV, and the marble baths provide make up mirrors, bathrobes, Loewe toiletries, Jacuzzi tubs and separate showers. The hotel also offers baby-sitting service. It has been well reviewed by Fernando Gallardo of El País.

A member of the Small Leading Hotels group, Époque Hotels, Chic Retreats (along with Seville's Casa 7, mentioned above), Magic Safari Lodges, and is a 4-flower selection of Inns of Spain. It's also a selection of Johansens, JP Moser, Great Small Hotels and Lugares Divinos.

Hacienda de Orán - A "heaven for horse lovers", also a member of Rusticae, but much smaller, simpler and less expensive, more of a B & B type of lodging. Located 27 kms from the city near Utrera, it sits in the middle of a vega surrounded by olive and palm trees, on 400 acres of land (haciendadeoran.com). It's the quintessential Andalusian hacienda from the 17th century, surrounded by whitewashed walls. There is a watchtower and stables. It has a restaurant, swimming pool, biking, and 4x4 excursions. There is a full riding program plus carriage rides. Its carriage museum has the best private collection of horse drawn carriages in Spain. The hacienda offers 13 double rooms, 4 jr. suites and 2 suites. Rooms are outfitted with king size beds, a/c, sat. TV, radio, desks and baths come with bathrobes. Joanne Wier holds week long cooking classes here. The hacienda does a brisk wedding business with the wedding banquets reserving the entire restaurant so you may want to book here mid-week. Breakfast costs an additional €12.

Caveat: Please read the guest reviews on innsofspain.com regarding flies! Remember that this is a working ranch as well as hotel.

Hotels Not Recommended

Doña María - Over priced, rooms are truly hit or miss, very Old Spain. Needs a thorough renovation.

Los Seises - just doesn't quite make it for me in terms of service or style.

Fernando III - aging, dreary, rather dark on inside, so-so staff, needs a face-lift.

Simón - very pretty downstairs courtyard which does convince at the outset, but I've read too many reports on travel boards about the very ordinary bedrooms. Should be better than it is since it's a member of estanciasdespana.com
